THE SCANDALOUS AFFAIR OF MY UMBRELLA.

an article of costly make, of silk and ebony and of a shapeless man are apt to be very neatly folded.

And when I reached the hotel where I was staying, I found my umbrella in the wainscot.

to the Olympian gods of the shadowy powers that rule the air, I found that this deed was done by the commission of a crime.

to the apple of my eye, a boyish heart was full of doubt; of the little windows where the light was shining through when it was opened out.

to the stoken hats are dear, to the accounts of astrakhan or fur, my childhood's dream, I would inquire about it, to the hopes. But this, to the most about the thing, I came to the handle, the face, the lining.

to the chances of the change, to the gamp I bore, to the wrap, and comfortless and strange, to the simply bound to the heavenly, to the tyrants with the cold, to the unobtrusive till the day, and then he was to the want of proper, to the realize my sing, to the editors at samite, to the and to the people gathered to the right to hear the music by the Lakeland, to the music was fine, to the exceptionally, to the summer suits, to the of each number, to the audience gave vent to their loud and contented, and it was 9 o'clock, to the number was given, to the for their homes.

Food Sale Will be Held Tomorrow at Munn Park.

The Ladies' Memorial Association will hold a food sale tomorrow at Munn Park, and all the housewives of the city are most cordially invited to attend and purchase their Sunday dinner of the ladies, who are striving so hard to raise funds for the further improvement of the cemetery. There will be pies, cakes, custards, cold meats, salads, and, in fact, every good thing imaginable, and it is hoped the ladies will enjoy a splendid patronage.

Any one who desires to send anything for the sale, the same will also be thankfully received. Such articles may be sent to the park early in the morning about 9 o'clock.

WHEN HE BREAKS AN ENGAGEMENT.

(By Laura Jean Libbey.)

About the meanest thing that a man can do is to make arrangements to pay a girl a call upon a particular evening and without sufficient reason break his word. Of course, there are circumstances which arise which make it a necessity for a man to forego his engagement. If there is any possible way by which he can communicate with the girl who is expecting him he is guilty of a serious breach of politeness if he fails to do so.

If there is anything which causes a woman to lose faith in a man it is to sit in her parlor nicely dressed and watching the hours as they fade away while he for whom she waits comes not. The girl who permits a young man to stroll along at any hour he happens along makes a serious mistake. After the clock has chimed 8:30, except in special cases, a young woman should cease to expect him to call. And she should on no account come down to the parlor to greet the man who has the temerity to put in an appearance at 9 o'clock of an evening.

The young man whose word cannot be depended upon certainly has not the making of a husband upon whom a girl can rely. It is men of this type who are oftentimes liable not to show up when the bride-to-be awaits him at the altar. The girl who gives way to a fit of weeping because of her disappointment when he doesn't call laughs in the face of kind fate which is trying to show her that she is building air-castle hopes. If he can present no adequate excuse she should not allow him to make a secret laughing stock of her upon another occasion.

The man who really is in love would shield his sweetheart from such an annoying experience instead of subjecting her to it. No man can reconstruct himself after marriage. The different phases of his character are sure to crop out sometimes when he calls upon his lady love. One of the worst faults of which he can be said to be guilty is deliberate failure to put in an appearance upon the evening on which he has promised to call.

THE COUNTRY BOY'S CREED

"I believe that the country which God made is more beautiful than the city, which man made; that life out-of-doors and in touch with the earth is the natural life of man. I believe that work with nature is more inspiring than work with the most intricate machinery. I believe that the dignity of labor depends not on what you do but on how you do it; that opportunity comes to a boy on the farm as often as to the boy in the city, that life is larger and freer and happier on the farm than in the town, that my success depends not upon my location, but upon myself, not upon my dreams, but upon what I actually do; not upon luck, but upon pluck. I believe in working when you work and playing when you play, and in giving and demanding a square deal in every act of life."

POCKETS HOLD THE LETTERS

Useful Case That Will Remind Woman of the Exact Status of Her Correspondence.

For anyone who is not in the habit of, perhaps, may be unable to answer letters directly they are received, a case provided with pockets in which answered and unanswered letters may be kept quite separate from each other, is a very necessary possession. In our sketch we show a practical and useful article for this purpose, and the material in which it may be carried out is almost a matter of choice. Silk, art serge, art linen or casement cloth would do equally well and the case should be lined with soft silk or sateen and bound at the edges with narrow ribbon or braid, according to the material that has been selected for its manufacture.

The front and back should be stiffened with thin cardboard sewn in between the cover and the lining. There is a fold-over flap which bends over the top of the case and fastens to the lower part of the front with ribbon strings. On this flap the word "letters" is embroidered, and inside, at the head of one of the divisions, is worked the word "unanswered" and on the other, "answered," so that it may be seen at a glance which letters require attention.

The upper sketch shows the case open with the letters exposed to view and in the lower, it is closed and secured with the ribbon strings.

A useful case can be made on exactly the same lines for paid or unpaid bills.

OVERALL SAVES THE DRESS

Garment Has Come to Be Looked Upon as Indispensable for Household Worker.

An overall, or one-piece apron, which can be slipped on or off at a moment's notice, is always useful and quite an indispensable possession to the girl who must help with the housework and perform duties of a more or less serious nature.

Two lengths of yard-wide material, measuring from the shoulder to the hem of the skirt, are required in the making. One length is folded through the center for the front, and is cut out rounding at the neck, with narrow pieces forming straps for the shoulders; the other length is cut lengthwise through the center, so that the selvage edges can be used for the hem each side of the back, and the cut edges joined under the arm to the front. The back is cut out under the arms and at the neck exactly as the front, and the edges bound or faced with bias strips. The seam under the arm is curved slightly, in order to make it fit the figure, and the back is closed with five or six plain bone buttons. Make French seams when joining shoulders and finish the bottom with a three-inch hem.

A patch pocket, five inches wide and six inches deep, is added to the right-hand side of the front. The pocket, armholes and pocket may be outlined with white or colored braid or bias bands of some contrasting material. Use gingham or percale for making an overall of this description, and be sure to make it long enough to entirely cover the gown.

Kilts Are Coming.

The side plaits that have been so cleverly introduced into the skirts this summer are merely advance agents of the kilted skirt that is coming back. Oh, it will not be the all-enveloping arrangement of heavy folds, but will fall from a fitted drape around the hips.

Already are very exclusive models being designed for soft silks that exemplify the idea yet are unobtrusive in the change of style.

You are not really surprised. The fullness at the hips has been consistent that we must accept the change philosophically, remembering that it is the rule of fashion!

Costume for Outings

For the majority of the day, out-of-door sports as well as for morning wear, the best costume for the traveler maiden is a simple, light-weight worsted skirt and a collection of smartly cut blouses. This costume will be useful for cramping, for riding, for walking and for any town or country which may unexpectedly be reached.

FOR AFTERNOON CALLS

LITTLE COAT AND GOWN OF THE SAME FABRIC.

Simple Yet Excessively Stylish Is the Model Pictured—Black Voile Over Messaline Is Material Recommended.

The little coats made of the fabric of the gown (and always worn with it on the street) have solved the problem for suitable calling costumes to be worn in summer weather. The pretty outfit pictured here is worth attention because it could hardly be less simple or more stylish.

The materials are black voile over messaline (or any supple silk of high luster). Satin may be used. Emerald green messaline appears in this model with the black voile laid over it and the two materials cut and sewed as one fabric. A band of shirring finishes the bottom of the skirt and all of the coat. The latter may be worn over a chiffon waist, but such models are made up as a rule for street wear and a waist is not essential.

The charming bolero hat is in primrose hemp with an overlay of heavy cream lace about the face. The little earrings of black jet are very chic as a finishing touch and a long black chain of jet beads may be worn as a further embellishment.

This model is very handsome made of black voile over cerise silk worn with primrose hat. A sunshade in black or cerise or in the two colors combined looks well with it also.

IDEAS ENOUGH TO SUIT ALL

Nothing But One's Own Taste Is the Guide for the Present Season Millinery.

The truth is, the fashionable woman has not such a choice in hats as the multitude. Look at any of the passengers on a street car and you will find that there are not two alike. Some wear a miniature tall hat made on the manly model. Others have taken the chimney pot, made the crown shallower at the back than at the front, and added a narrow up-turned brim. Pretty girls hide their faces by a sort of turban that descends below the eyebrows and has an upturned battlemented brim and feathers behind, anywhere, in fact, but where a feather used to be. Some wear a Dutch bonnet of silk with no stiffening, turning back from the face. When this is made of soft brown satin, the color of the hair, it looks as if the wearer had forgotten her headgear altogether.

Enormous hats have veils, carefully adjusted, so that the face seems to be suspended in a hammock. Even the ubiquitous sailor has yielded to the cheap tunnel-shaped straws to be bought for a small price.

But the fashionable woman has to choose with greater care. She can only permit herself to be bizarre "with a difference," and there are sufficient shapes to get one to suit her if it so pleases her. So much in a hat depends on the way it is put on, and the hat of today needs much adjustment.

Pique for Children.

This year is to be a pique year for excellence for the small ones.

As a matter of fact, the quantity of little pique coats is almost incredible. Anything prettier than these little garments it would be hard to find. The freshness and crispness of the pique has no rival even in linen, and many of the coats and frocks are adorned with a kind of pierced work, so as to produce exactly the same effect as hosiery Anlaise. In other cases they are simply made with turnover collars worked in white flax thread in spots of daisies, periwinkles, or roses, while big white pearl-buttons represent the almost inevitable finish.

The Three-Figure Skirt.

The three-figures skirt has reappeared, and in one instance the flounces open down the front, showing the white. This "flange" is carried up, forming the bodice, rather short-waisted, and silk or satin lining, as often black as set in mothers at the back. Above rises a chemise of the lace, and long sleeves of the same reach to the wrists.
